Episode 11:

Reading: 短文聽讀

Throughout our lives, we all learn a new language under various circumstances and in different environments. Some of us learn a new language in our hometown. Others simply go abroad and learn a language in a place where that language is spoken. Whether our learning of a new language takes place in our hometown or abroad, we must keep in mind that learning another language also requires learning the culture of that language. Every culture has its own way of expressing things, and we must learn to accept the way people in that culture express their thoughts. It is through accepting the other culture that we can successfully communicate with other people.
