

Dialogue: [Episode 18]

Andy: Wow, are you May? You are drop-dead gorgeous today!

May: Thanks. Should I take that as a compliment?

Andy: Absolutely. An expression of my highest admiration. Ah, who did that picture?

May: My mom painted it.

Andy: I admire your mom.

May: Really? She would be happy to hear that.

Cooper: So, you're a fan of my mom now? Join us in the living room, please.

Everyone is here.

Andy: Hi, Nana! You're the very picture of celestial beauty tonight.

Nana: Thank you.

Female student B: Andy, you know, if another woman heard you talk like that, she'd punch you in the nose.

Andy: I'm sorry. I ought to get punched. It's hard to control myself in front of pretty girls.

Female student B: Simple rule: fewer words, fewer mistakes.

Andy: Yes, Madame!

May: Andy, could you come over here and take some pictures?

Andy: Sure! Where should I start?

May: Take some pictures of the beautiful food and the beautiful young women, would you, please?

Andy: I'll start with the beautiful food.

May: How come?

Andy: Because the young women will be here all night, but the food will be gone in a few minutes.

May: Well, well. I see you've got a sharp mind.

Andy: Should I take that as a compliment?

May: I guess so.

Cooper: I think the way to offer a compliment and avoid offending someone is to first change the way you think.

Andy: What do you mean, change the way you think?

Cooper: Put yourself in the shoes of the other person. Show a bit of consideration.
